Bob, I went and looked at the property in question this afternoon. The property houses several inoperative vehicles and alot of trash, some old appliances, i.e. air conditioners, televisions, refrigerator, numerous tires and wheels for autos and trucks. There was one area with some used oil staining in the southeast corner of the back lot near three drums. Two of the steel drums were filled with trash and one plastic drum was filled with trash and apparently water. No other drums could be readily observed on the property. Stirring of the filled drum showed no evidence of oil, but one oil filter. No waste oil tank was observed, either above or below ground. The property did not appear to be contaminated with oily substances or anything other than the trash scattered around in piles everywhere. Most of the area formerly used was asphalted and fairly clean it appears. The garage area was inaccessible where auto air conditioning repair and general auto repair may have formerly been conducted.
